November 15, 2020 Thirty-third Sunday in Ordinary Time

As the liturgical year is gradually coming to an end, we are today being reminded of the reality of the end time. We are reminded that each one of us will give an account of how well we have utilized our talents in the service of God and humanity. I think this is the time for us to ask ourselves the number of lives we have touched positively this year. Could it be that we have destroyed more life than we have blessed? Have you used your talents for your own personal aggrandizement or that of your family and friends alone? These are the kinds of questions that should engage our minds at this time. It is imperative for us to realize that each new day is an opportunity for us to correct the mistakes of the past. We can live better, act better and judge better. There is no need to plunge into perpetual regret. Each day is an opportunity for us to touch the life of people with our gifts. No one is so lacking in talent as not to be able to contribute positively to the growth of the kingdom of God. Eventually, we might not be fruitful in equal measure but what the Lord wants from us is to make effort to be better and not to bury our talents.
